Reap the solar rewards

SOLAR is a great way to reduce your energy bills and reliance on energy companies by harnessing the sun's free energy.

Solahart has been delivering hot water free from the sun to households around the world for more than 60 years.

Today its range has expanded to include solar power (photovoltaic) and battery storage technology.

Solahart has an extensive range of commercial solutions for businesses and farms trying to reduce their energy bills, particularly where they use a lot of hot water or power during daylight hours.

Replace your old gas or electric water heater with a Solahart Solar Water Heater and you could save 50 to 90 per cent of your water heating energy consumption.

Residential and commercial solar customers are eligible for government incentives known as Small-Scale Technology Certificates, which are linked to Australia's Renewable Energy Target.

These incentives are generally paid as a point of sale discount and greatly reduce the up-front cost of going solar.

Solahart Albany & Great Southern is locally-owned and operated by Darren and Jessica Wood.

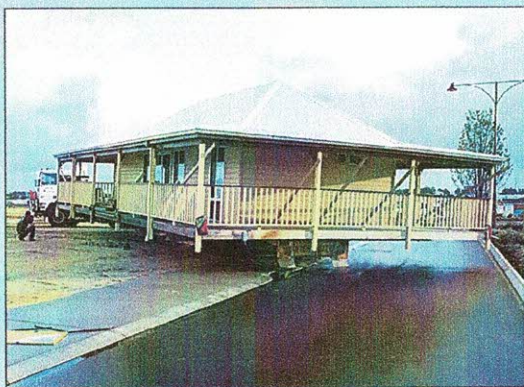

They have experience with providing solar power solutions for farms with single, two and three-phase power supply throughout the Great Southern region and Mr Wood has been installing and servicing Solahart hot water systems for more than 25 years.

Mr and Ms Wood, along with their helpful team, focus on providing a comprehensive, efficient and quality service to their rural customers, from Walpole to Bremer Bay, Kojoonup and Lake Grace and anywhere in between and surrounding areas.

If you are renovating, building or just looking to save some money, make sure you contact the team at Solahart.
